Session 3128.0: Re-Visioning the Nation's Public Health Training System

Organizer: Jennifer McKeever, MSW, MPH

Moderator: Vincent Lafronza, Ed.D. M.S.

Session Description: Our nation relies on an estimated 500,000 tribal, federal, state and local public health practitioners to provide diverse services that prevent and control disease, ensure safe and healthy environments, and promote healthy behaviors. Most of the public health workforce does not have formal public health training, yet they are expected to master new approaches to deliver high quality services and continue to meet community expectations.

In response to this need, in September 2014, the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), with support from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), re-designed its Public Health Training Center (PHTC) model to serve a modern public health workforce. Participants in this session will learn about the new public health training delivery model, including what resources and services are available in your area to support training and workforce development.
